A TEENAGER left severely disabled by meningitis after his condition went undetected for several days has won a £1m-plus payout from Princess Alexandra Hospital.

The boy, who can only be referred to as 'H' for legal reasons, was just seven years old when he was taken to the accident and emergency department at PAH by his parents in July 2002.

In papers put before the Hight Court this week, barrister Elizabeth Ann Gumbel QC said the boy was complaining of backache and feeling unwell. But he was not admitted to the hospital or diagnosed with meningitis until almost a week later.

'H' who is now aged 17 had to be transferred to Addenbrooke's Hospital in Cambridge where he underwent emerBy COURT REPORTER star@hertsessexnews.co.uk

Although doctors managed to save his life, the brain damage he had already suffered left him with life-long disabili-

His legal team argued that a loss of power to the left leg and arm ought to have rung alarm bells in the minds of medical staff who saw him, leading to an earlier admission and diagnosis.

They claimed that had he been treated 24 hours earlier, the catastrophic brain damage would have been averted

Through his mother, 'H' sued the PAH NHS Trust for negligence in failing to diagose the warning signs of meningitis

In November 2009 the trust admitted breach of duty and on Monday agreed to

Mr Justice Eady, approving the settlement, paid tribute to the boy's parents, whom he said had cared for him "with great devotion since the devastating events 10 years ago."

A PAH spokesperson said: "Princess Alexandra Hospital NHS Trust offers its unreserved apologies for the tragic incident in 2002 which has affected the patient and his family.

"Since this time the trust has made many changes to its practice that will help ensure this does not happen again.
"Families attending the hospital can be reassured the trust's teams will deliver high quality, safe and attentive care during their stay. Patient safety remains the trust's number one priority.

Harry thrilled by pub staff's generous gift

KIND-hearted staff at a Harlow pub held a whipround to buy a walking aid for one of their elderly customers.

Harry Hayward (82), suffers from osteoporosis and would fall over "three or four times a day".

But the pensioner, who has been visiting the pub restaurant for his dinner most evenings for more than six months, said he was thrilled when during a recent visit he was presented with the walker.

"The manager came up and asked me how many times I had fallen over that day," said Mr Hayward. "I told him a few and then he pulled the walker out from behind the bar and said it was for me.

"I was so touched. I could never have afforded one on my own. I want to say a huge thank you to them all; I haven't fallen over once since!"

Yates supervisor Claire Meyo said a group of 10 staff had put cash towards the surprise gift.

"One of our employees had found out that Harry wasn't able to get a walking aid on the NHS and was really upset about it as we knew he struggled," she

"So we all agreed to chip in some money and buy one ourselves. Everyone was happy to help and we're really pleased it has made such a positive difference."

'Hit-and-run' driver could have killed me

A WOMAN whose left leg was By VICKY LANE broken in two places when she was the victim of a hit-and-run accident has urged the driver to turn himself in to police.

Melanie Sloane (34) and partner Adam Howell (31) were walking home after a night out over the August bank holiday weekend when her ordeal began.

"It was just before midnight and we were crossing Elizabeth Way to get home," said Melanie, who lives in The Hornbeams, Harlow.

"Although we had seen the car it was some distance away so we didn't think anything of it. Then suddenly the driver accelerated and caught me just as I was about to step up onto the payement on the other side.

"I don't remember a lot from that point but Adam said I went over the top of the car and landed on the pathway. The driver just sped off." Melanie, who works as an assistant manager at The Willow pub in Hodings Road, was left with a double break in her left leg which required surgery. She also suffered burns from contact with the car grille, a black eye and various cuts and bruises. "I had to have metal pins put in my leg to hold it back together," she said. "Five weeks later and I am still unable to walk, unable to work and in a huge amount of pain.

"It will probably take a couple more months and a lot of physio to get back on my feet. In the meantime I am stuck in bed reliant of other people to do everything for me. It is just horrible.'

Melanie said she could not understand how the driver carried on without wondering what happened that night.

"The fact is I am lucky to be alive," she said. "If I had landed on my head the driver would have killed me and yet they obviously don't care enough to do the right thing and come forward. I can only assume they were drunk or on drugs."

She added: "I would urge anyone who saw what happened that night and thinks they know who was responsible or even the driver himself to get in touch with police. Quite simply, this person should not be on the road. Next time they could kill someone.

A police spokesperson confirmed were investigating the incident. "We believe the vehicle involved was a small hatchback, possibly a Vauxhall Corsa or Citroen Saxo, with a distincloud exhaust and dark in colour," he said.

"It would also possibly have a dent in near side where the victim was hit.'

The accident happened on the evening of Sunday. August 26. Anyone with information should conofficers at the Chigwell road policing unit on 101.

Safety partnership continues

THE work of Harlow Council's community safety teams has received police accreditation for the third year running.

A plaque commemorating the official partnership between the authority and Essex Police was presented to council chairwoman Maggie Hulcoop by Superintendent Luke Collison at Thursday's full council meeting.

Under the scheme, council officers involved with community safety patrols are trained to work to police standards and share information more effectively with the force.

Accreditation also means that some officers are granted certain police powers, including the ability to confiscate alcohol and tobacco from minors.

Councillor Hulcoop told the Star: "The Community Safety Accreditation

THE parents of a tot receiving treatment for cancer is organising a special 'pink party' fundraiser for the charity that has been supporting them.

It was in July when Kerry McCarthy (32), of Felmongers, Harlow, first felt a lump on the stomach of daughter Ava Despite receiving advice to see how things were after a week, Kerry said her "mother's instinct" told her something was seriously wrong and she took her to A&E. Within hours Ava was transferred to Great Ormond Street Children's Hospital where she was diagnosed with Wilms tumour, a form of cancer affecting the kidney, and taken into surgery. "Those few days when we first "Those few days when we first found out seem like such a blur," said Kerry, who works as a first aid trainer. "Apart from complaining of a belly ache, Ava had seemed healthy so it was a huge shock to suddenly find out she was so ill.

"The tumour, which has now been removed along with her left kidney, weighed 869g – almost the size of Ava's head. Unfortunately they found out the cancer had spread into her lymph nodes so she is currently undergoing. currently undergoing chemotherapy and will start radiotherapy soon. "We are a positive family," Kerry said. "We have cried our tears and now want something good to come out of this.

good to come out of this.

"The pink party idea came after we asked Ava what she would like as a treat once she was feeling better. So we decided to make it into a full afternoon of fundraising and have organised a children's disco, face painting, various games, stalls, and refreshments refreshments.

"We are now appealing to local companies to help with raffle donations. Anything, however big or small, would be really appreciated and be helping a fantastic cause."

Kerry added: "One thing we have learned whilst spending so much time in hospital these last few months is that, as a parent, the happier your child is, the easier it is for you to

"Charities like the Children's Cancer and Leukaemia Group not only fund vital research but also offer so much support to all the family, which really does help to make the horrible times that bit better."

Charity in need of a volunteer driver

A CHARITY supporting people in Harlow suffering from Parkinson's disease is desperately searching for a volunteer mini bus driver

The town's branch of Parkinson's UK runs a free social event every Wednesday at the Latton Bush Centre to give those suffering the condition, which affects the central nervous system, some time away from their homes in the company of others. However, the group's current bus driver – chairman Patrick Marchant – will soon no longer be able to do the pick-up and drop-off runs.

"I am in my 70s now and unfortunately my license will expire at the end of the year," he explained. "We desperately need someone who can spare a few hours every Wednesday to come and help.

"It is an extremely fulfilling job and really helps these people, a lot of whom are stuck at home all week otherwise.

Chocolate Run's special invitation

VOLUNTEERS working for a Harlow charity supporting the homeless are inviting past and current helpers to a celebratory event.

Members of Harlow Chocolate Run, who also run the Harlow Christmas Haven each year, are hoping as many people who have been involved with either charity will attend the social evening next Thursday (October 11).

The event has been organised to acknowledge the 25 years of commitment given by the Harlow branch founders Mick and Selma Granger, who decided to step down from their positions this year.

It is also an opportunity to discuss plans for future charity events.

The event takes place at the GPCA Centre in Abercrombie Way from 7pm. For more information call Jo Busson on 07951 612803.

Foodbank launches £5,000 appeal to buy van

A £5,000 appeal has been launched by a Harlow food charity to buy a delivery van to aid their increasing workload.

The Harlow Foodbank currently uses volunteers' cars to transport the 23 tonnes of food it receives annually.

However, the charity - which provides food parcels for local families experiencing financial hardship - says the method is putting too much strain on their members as demand for their services increases.

"Each tonne is like a pallet's worth of food," explained director of community services Gary Knott. "You can imagine that it takes quite a few car journeys back and forth sometimes to get everything to and from the warehouse which takes a lot of time and commitment from our volunteers.

"With a van we could do each run in just the one trip." Gary said the charity, which has set up an online donation site for the appeal, said they hoped people in the community would support it by organising fundraising "We are appealing for help in any shape or form to raise the money - or may even get lucky and find someone able to donate a van," he said.

"Essentially, it is to help local people get back on their feet when they have hit hard times. Once we have our own van we also hope to extend the scheme out further to help more people outside of Harlow."

Council planning a public meeting over 'Black Run'

By VICKY LANE

vicky.lane@hertsessexnews.co.uk

COUNCIL chiefs were this week accused of "moving the goalposts" after campaigners calling for an alleyway near their homes to be closed were refused permission to debate their petition.
Harlow MP Robert Halfon had colected more than 650 signatures on the e-petition calling for the closure of the 'Black Run' – a footpath between Abbotsweld Primary School and Old Orchard – after he was advised it would secure him a slot on the agenda of last Thursday's full

The MP had hoped to trigger a debate about the alleyway, which local residents have been try-ing to have closed since the late 1960s because of ongoing problems with anti-social behaviour.

But after sending the the completed petition to the council the day before the meeting, Mr Halfon was told it had not been received in time to be considered by councillors

He was, however, allowed to present the petition informally to council leader Mark Wilkinson before the start of the meeting.

Mr Halfon told the Star: "I received an email last Wednesday night saying in accordance with standard council procedure it would take up to 14 days for the petition to be acknowledged and, therefore, was too late to be considered in Thursday's full council.

Mystery of the church spire and a helicopter

READER Ian Kennett has written to Nostalgia asking for help to confirm whether an image in his head from the town is an accurate memory of events or simply something he has dreamt up.

"I have lived in the same house in Harlow since 1952, which makes me very old," writes Ian, of Felmongers.

Fairy costume was an old party dress

LTHOUGH we have had no luck establishing the title of Tany's Dell Primary School's Christmas play of 1952, we have had some success in finding out a little more about the production.

Janet Guild (nee Davis), whose brother Keith supplied this photograph of the young cast in their costumes, said she remembered it was a rather historic moment for the infant class.

"I can't remember the title or the storyline of the play but I do recall it being the first time the infants had ever had a Christmas 'she said. "Me and my twin brother Keith started school when we were 5½, but the infants part of the school was only starting to be established.

fairy; there were a few fairies that year by the looks of things!

Janet, who now lives in Wiltshire, said she was a pupil of teacher Mr Dunn, who has been featured in Nostalgia over the past few weeks.

"Mr Dunn was a really lovely man," she said. "We had him for three years!

"I'm afraid I don't recall an awful lot from my schooldays other than that my brother and I were one of five sets of twins, that we both hated the school dinners but enjoyed the school milk, we had to supply our own biscuits for break time and we found the Mark Hall annexe where we were taught very spooky!"

Reader Val Munday (nee Claisse) also got in touch after seeing the picture in the Star.

"What a surprise to see myself and my friend, Joy Perry, in this week's paper," she wrote. "We are fifth and sixth from the left in the second row.

"I have no recognition of this day at all but remember a lot of the faces. I worked with Joy for a number of years and we still see each other occasionally."

Val added: "I remember Keith and his sister Janet very well and Janet was my hairdresser for some years after I left

"Mr Dunn was also a great teacher who I remember very well. It was nice to hear some of the old names again!"

Do you still have wartime ID card?

DID you used to have a national ID card? Harlow resident Alan Hawkins came across his while he was having a clear out at home and thought it might jog a few memories.

"I thought readers may be interested in seeing these because they may have owned one themselves or just be interested to see how we were identified back in those days," he writes.

The cards were introduced in 1939 shortly after the outbreak of the Second World War. On Friday, September 29 a national registration day was held where, under the hastily-passed Registration Act, every household in Britain was presented with a form to fill out in a similar way to a modern day census. Over the weekend of September 30 -October 1, enumerators visited each household, checked the details and issued the registration cards there and then. Until the act was repealed in 1952, registration cards like Mr Hawkins' were compulsory and had to be produced on demand or presented to a police station within 48 hours.

THE Market Square in Harlow town centre will come alive with music and dance on Saturday as Black History Month celebra-

The fun-packed day of festivities heralds the start of a month of culturally-enriching activities reflecting the history of the African diaspora – the dispersal of African people througout the world – while encouraging community cohesion.

Organised by local charitable group PATACC (Performing Arts in Traditional African and Caribbean Culture), Saturday's cele-brations kick off at 10am and will feature activities including belly dancing, live music and drama performances.

Visitors can also sample traditional dishes from across the continent, browse exhibitions of arts and crafts and even try their hand at African drumming.

PATACC chairman Michael Koi-Larbi said they were plan-

Fatal accident driver sentenced

A MOTORIST who left the scene of an accident in which a Harlow pensioner died has been given a community order.

The car driven by Mohammed Mannan hit 79-year-old pedestrian Henry Bailey, of Dunstalls, on the A120 outside Little Hadham.

Mannan (51), of Buntingford, was sentenced to complete 120 hours of unpaid work and given nine points on his licence by Stevenage magistrates last week.

He had pleaded guilty to one count of failing to stop and was found guilty of failing to report the accident to police within a reasonable time, a charge he denied.

The court heard that Mannan had briefly stopped his car but then drove away without getting out, thinking he had struck a deer.

Better ways to ease the congestion on our roads

link road between the A414 and M11 in order to reduce congestion in Harlow but no mention of the possible consequences (Star, September

The A414 is essentially an east-west road and, if the bottleneck at Harlow is removed, it will rapidly become the M25 relief road. This would attract far more traffic to the Harlow area. It would also cause major problems for the people of Hertford.

Look at the way the M11 has attracted so much more traffic than was ever seen on the former A11, yet Sawbridgeworth remains congested. I am not a traffic engineer but it looks to me as if Edinburgh Way has been designed to inhibit the flow of traffic, not to ease it on its way.

If it is thought desirable to reduce congestion in Harlow there are various measures that can be taken without spending a fortune and without spreading concrete all over the countryside.

I would start by adjusting all of the traffic lights so that they are not stopping traffic unnecessarily when nobody is waiting to emerge from the other direction. Anyone who has travelled past Bush Fair when the traffic lights have failed will be aware that the queues disappear. Simply switching off this set of lights would ease congestion, save money and reduce the carbon footprint.

Whenever a bypass is built to route traffic away from a town, the boundary of that town invariably expands until houses are built up against the bypass, creating the problem all over again. Do we really want this?

Fencing off part of common would remove risk of injury

SIR, I reguarly walk my dogs on Latton Common and the horses kept on there break free from their tethers regularly.

I have lost count of the number of times I have been followed by these horses, with one even rearing up behind me with no provocaction. And yes, my dogs were on leads.

My seven-year-old daughter was knocked over by one running across the common and she is now scared to walk the dogs with me.

I've often thought it would make more sense to fence one half of the common where the horses could be kept safely and the other half could be enjoyed by walkers, with or without dogs, without having to alter their path to avoid the

Grieving chef took his own life after death of grandfather

A TALENTED chef left devastated by the death of his grandfather five months earlier, shot himself at his home, an inquest was told.

Tom Barnard (29), who was living with his parents Andrew and Fiona in Potash Road, Matching Green, had a long history of depressive illness and had said in the past he planned to kill himself

Chelmsford Coroner's Court was told on Thursday that on May 24. Mr Barnard forced open a gun cabinet at home. His body

The inquest was told Mr Barnard worked in the banking sector after leaving university but changed direction after the financial crash in 2008.

He retrained at Westminster Cookery School to pursue his passion for cooking and worked at Jamie Oliver's restaurant in Canary Wharf. More recently he had been working as a researcher in the renewable energy industry.

Essex coroner Caroline Beasley-Murray recorded a verlife while suffering from a diagnosed mental illness.

She said: "He was clearly affected when his grandfather died. It was a combination of things. He had a chequered few years and lurched from crisis to

After the hearing, his parents issued a statement in which they said: "We will miss him so much his lovely smile, his great sense of humour, his quick intelligence and his caring, sensitive nature.

"Tom loved nothing better than chef. He was extremely popular and had many friends.

"Words cannot describe our loss at this time, but we gain some consolation knowing that he is at peace."

His parents said that the death of his grandfather in January seemed to be a turning point.

They continued: "Despite the love and support of his family, his girlfriend and his many longstanding friends, who have helped him through some diffi-

Matthew Bagnall, prosecuting, said the couple had been celebrating their daughter's 21st birthday and had returned home in the early hours of the morning.

They started arguing when they could not find the front door key. Peat picked up and threw the recycling container which struck his wife on the forehead, causing a gash.

The court was told the defendant had attacked his wife on two previous occasions, receiving a caution in July 2005 and a custodial sentence in August 2006.

But it also heard that Mrs Peat had withdrawn her complaint and the cou-ple hoped to restore their relationship. Peat had referred himself to two anger management counselling organisations since the incident.

Gary Ryan, representing Peat, said he had not intended to hurt his wife but accepted he was reckless because he was drunk.

Mr Ryan said that both of them were agitated because they could not find the door key and there was a bit of pushing and shoving. In temper, he tipped out the contents of her handbag on the coal bunker.

"She pushed him and he fell backwards over the little green food container," said Mr Ryan. "In temper he picked it up and threw it. It either hit her directly or it hit a wall before hit-ting her. They finally found the key" Recorder Salid Kainth told Peat: "At 54 to assault anybody let alone your own wife is absolutely appalling. You deserve prison, but I will suspend it, not because of what you have done but because of the letter provided by your wife and your guilty plea."

Peat was sentenced to 12 months suspended for two years and ordered to attend an integrated domestic abuse programme.

Some basic principles about Universal Credit

A MAJOR part of the Government's welfare reform agenda is the forthcoming introduction of Universal Credit.

UC is due to start as a pilot scheme in some areas of the north west of England in April 2013 and will be launched nationally from October

Because the regulations have not yet been passed in respect of UC, not all the details are known. However, there are some basic principles to UC that we do know.

UC is a means-tested benefit which will replace income-based Jobseeker's Allowance, Inc Support, Working and Child Tax Credit, income-based Employment and Support Allowance and Housing Benefit for new out-of-work claimants from October 2013.

Existing claimants of these benefits will gradually be transferred to UC between 2014 and 2017.

UC is to be claimed and managed online. Some support will be available for this.

The UC payment will include a standard allowance and five additional elements, depending on the claimant's circumstances. Those additions are the child/disabled child element, childcare element, carer element limited canability for work element and a housing element.

The standard allowance and any additional elements will be paid directly to the claimant on a monthly basis and claimants will be expected to pay their landlord or mortgage provider directly.

Claimants who are expected to look for work will be required to con to work, seeking activities in a similar way to those receiving Jobseeker's Allowance at the

However, the sanction imposed if they breach this commitment is much more severe: a potential reduction or withdrawal of UC for up to three years. The current maximum is 6 months.

Some claimants will not be expected to look for work. These include those unfit for work, some carers and lone parents who have a child under the age of one.

For those in work who are under Pay As You Earn, it is expected that HM Revenue & Customs will update individual UC accounts on any changes in earnings as they happen so that benefit is adjusted accordingly.

Those not under the PAYE system -for example those who are self employed - will have to update hanges in income themselves as they occur.

All other changes of circumstances will also need to be updated by all YOU'RE engaged! Congratulations. Once you've spread the happy news among friends and family no doubt you'll already be putting plans in place for the big day.

This is the time to start visiting local wedding fairs and drawing up lists of possible venues.

Planning for the day you'll want to remember for the rest of your life is worth doing properly. It may sound obvious but a little forward planning will go a long way.

For example, when are you planning to hold the event? Do you dream of a beachside ceremony with just a few friends and family members or are menas and ramily memoers or are you hoping for a winter celebration complete with candles, a Christmas tree and fur trimmed dress with vast numbers of people to help you mark the occasion?

The season will not only dictate the style of wedding you have, it will also determine what is available.

Summer is still the most popular time to get married and some of the most popular venues are likely to be booked up years

Work out how many friends and family you want to invite.

The size of your guest list has a huge impact on where you can marry.

Hospice starts a fundraising business club

A NEW business initiative to foster relationships between St Clare Hospice and corporate groups was launched this week. The St Clare Hospice Clarity Business Club will offer members access to local networking events, greater community presence, acknowledged corporate social responsibility and stronger brand recognition.

In return, the hospice wants local businesses to take part in organised corporate events and challenges, sponsor high-profile fundraisers and nominate St Clare as their charity of the "Working in partnership with St Clare can be hugely beneficial to business and, ultimately, our community," said corporate relationship manager Maria Tillett-Hayes.

"Clarity Business Club will hold regular network events at the hospice and publish monthly enewsletters to the business community. We want to keep people informed and give local companies a local voice. Harlow MP Robert Halfon, who helped to launch the business club at the first networking event, added: "The hospice does some ground breaking fundraising and this is yet another example. AS the month of witches and ghouls descends once more, one man is hoping to give horror fans their scariest Hallowe'en experience yet.

Freelance graphic designer and film-maker Antony White has organised his own role-playing zombie survival evening after taking part in a similar experience earlier this year.

"My girlfriend Carly [Wain] and I have taken part in a number of these horror experiences and although they were good, we have always come away thinking we could do better," said the self-confessed horror fanatic, of Churchgate Street, Harlow.

"It was after attending the last one in March that we decided to just go for it and organise our own event."

Enrolling a number of actors, the couple quickly set about developing their own zombie apocalyptic storyline, titled The Last Survivors. They then secured what Antony (26) describes as the unrivalled venue of the 'secret' nuclear bunker at Kelvedon Hatch near Brentwood.

"Arranging the venue was the hardest

ANTONY WHITE AND CARLY WAIN

bit," said Antony. "It is a museum during the day so we had to ensure we could work around its usual operations, but we just knew it would be the perfect setting. Certainly no-one else is running a zombie experience in a real life nuclear bunker.'

The moment participants arrive at the base they will be dropped into what he describes as a real-life horror film. "Our aim is to make it as believable as possible, so from the start you will be thrown into the apocalypse and everyone will be in character.

"The story is centred around a soldier who, faced with impending apocalypse, has been sent to meet you to take you to the safety of the bunker. However, there will be some decisions to make along the way and you may meet some other survivors who aren't so friendly."

With several successful events already under their belt, Antony said he and his team were looking forward to launching the business with a series of special nights over the Hallowe'en

"The feedback we have received so far has been brilliant," he said. "We change the story each time and so far have not had a bad word said."

He added: "Our overall aim is to run these events on a regular basis and turn this into a full-time business. Essentially, if you like to be scared then this is an experience not to be missed."

For more information on The Last Survivors event or to book one of the Hallowe'en slots, visit www.thelastsurvivors.co.uk.

"Collectively, we've over 80 years of hands-on experience of the motor trade parts and service."
The site, one of 74 nationwide, also runs a special delivery service with the ability to convey parts to garages in Harlow within one hour.

"We also offer really competitive prices and a loyalty discount card to help DIY motorists reduce their costs, with expert advice on the parts they'll need for the job in hand," added Denise.

POT OF GOLD FOUND!

JEWELLERY ROADSHOW

Couple receive cash award for unwanted items.

A local couple this week had a very lucky day when visiting a Jewellery Road show. Like most households they had a drawer full of bits and bobs including an old gent's watch from approximately 1930. The watch was working but had been left to them. A selection of old, broken and incomplete rings and a few odd items of unusual jewellery were also included.

"The young couple were delighted with the good news," said Mr Paul Franks, a professional jeweller. He went on to say, "The couple asked me not to reveal the exact amount they received but I can confirm we are talking thousands of pounds."

Like most readers you probably have dreamt about winning the pools or finding a pot of gold. Many households have hidden treasure sitting around with the owners not knowing the true value. Mr Franks added, "With many years of experience in valuing and purchasing watches, jewellery and gems, I could tell you many stories when people have visited a road show with items that were seemingly of little value to them." Whilst reading this article, many readers will be thinking of an old item or a piece of unused jewellery.

Many items are hoped to be found." Your help is needed to make this unusual event a success with a free valuation service and no obligation to sell, what is there to lose? Things you should look for and take this week include broken rings, old chains, pocket watches, old silver, diamond and gem set jewellery (even with stones missing), old pictures, Object D'Art, coins, medals and virtually anything old or interesting. Their buyers urgently require stock for collectors and overseas customers, and are offering an instant cash settlement on any items they buy.

No matter how large or small your find, you will be pleasantly surprised by their cash offer.

WHAT HAVE YOU HIDDEN AWAY?

Many people are not aware of the value of unusual or old items that they have around the house. Family heirlooms are often sold but only then is there true value realised. Today many record prices are constantly being paid and with the latest crime figures it is an easy decision to sell or store valuables after all an item in a drawer or box is left usually year after year waiting to be lost or stolen. Most unusual items of old jewellery are not out of fashion and are of little use, but there are collectors desperate for all items. The gent's wristwatch market has never been better and antiques and old furniture are being bought by overseas purchasers for record amounts.

Have a good look through your chest of drawers or old jewellery box and don't forget broken or damaged items are also wanted. Jewellery Road show offering a professional, free valuation service, and an instant cash opportunity to sell any unwanted items no matter how small or large. Our experts are seeking stock and ask you to help in their search. Be sure you visit the road show, it is sure to be an event not to miss. You never know, it could be your lucky day!

So don't forget, take a look through your chest of drawers, in the attic or in your jewellery box and in fact, anywhere!

Crime double shows two sides of the same coin

LOCAL playwright Simon Mawdsley treated Harlow audiences to two new one-act plays last week under the heading of 'Crime Scenes'

When the curtain first opened for Housebound we found Fiona (Caroline Petherbridge) being held hostage in her own home by Billy, a failed small-time crook (Martin Bedwell) who was hoping to coerce her bank manager husband to part with £100,000 for her release.

This threatening situation quickly turned into hilarious comedy as their relationship developed and their weaknesses and foibles were exposed.

A number of set-pieces including the reading of a message to be given down the telephone to her husband and a battle with a wasp brought gales of laughter from a responsive audience, while the clever ending – with Fiona allowing Billy to leave when his plans had totally failed – proved dramatically satisfying.

REVIEW

Both actors played their characters to perfection, delivering their lines with razorsharp timing and wringing every possible laugh from the brilliantly-written script. But there were not many laughs to be found in Mawdsley's second play, Dead Wait. Focusing on the interrogation of a murder suspect in a police interview room, things turned out not be what they seemed and in a clever twist the tables were turned on the police inspector carrying out the investigation.

This was a strongly-worded play and the script made the unlikely premise believable.

Clever lighting by Jared Greenall enabled the actors to step outside the interrogation room from time to time in order to confer.

Richard Parsley as Wells, the police inspector, was outstanding, giving a polished performance of gravitas and total credibility. Also impressive was Paul Johnson as the suspect, giving a threatening edge to every utterance.

Wendy Grant, as Crosby, was perhaps a little too feminine for the hard-nosed policewoman but gave her usual professional performance, while Mike Hughes was just right in his role as Rix, the iunior copper.

Simon Mawdsley's playwriting skills coupled with some excellent performances provided the audience with a captivating and contrasting evening's theatre – and no doubt everyone in the audience will be looking forward to his next efforts.

A second helping of David's comic capers

By CHRIS MOSS

WHO said going to church can't be

In the second instalment of his hilarious Glory Be! comic book series, Harlow author and devout Christian David C Hill sets out to prove churchgoers come from all walks of life - and can have a wicked sense of humour to boot.

Set in the surreal world of Riverdale. Chariots Of Ire centres around a series of increasingly off-the-wall email exchanges between the charismatic pastor of the local church and his Machiavellian flock as the congregation prepares for the Christian

Taking its artistic inspiration from The Simpsons creator Matt Groening, the deftly-illustrated 84-page effort is pitched somewhere between hit US cartoon Family Guy and Gary Larsson's acclaimed Far Side series – albeit with a distinct Christian premise running

"I'd wanted to get around to writing the second comic much sooner but other commitments got in the way," said David, of Churchgate Street. "The first book sold close to 4,000 copies so I was pretty sure there would be an appetite for a follow-up, albeit three years later!"

A member of the Riverside Church in Hoddesdon, David said most of the wacky characters encountered in the book had been inspired by people he'd met at church or in the community. "I now get members of the congregation coming up to me and asking if a particular character is based on them," he added. "The truth is that all the characters have been influenced in some way by the people I've met, I've just exaggerated certain character traits to exploit their comic potential.

"Some find the humour a little close to the bone but I've never had any real complaints."

Despite the comic's overt Christian themes. David said the comedy would appeal to churchgoers and non-believers alike. "Although most of the comic is set in or around a church, I'm confident that people who don't consider themselves Christians

"There are a lot of pop-culture references will still enjoy reading it," he said.

in there and while it may not be littered with profanities like other adult comics, the humour is definitely for a more mature audience used to watching things like Family Guy and The Simpsons

• Glory Be! Chariots Of Ire is priced at $5.99 and is available online from www.glorybe.co.uk.

CHARLIE (Logan Lerman) is devastated by the suicide of his good friend Michael and the senseless tragedy haunts the sensitive teenager as a new term beckons.

The lad's father (Dylan McDermott) and mother (Kate Walsh) hope Charlie will blossom in higher education but, as usual, their boy remains on the sidelines as a silent observer to the rituals of school life

The only person who seems to notice Charlie is English teacher Mr Anderson (Paul Rudd), who recognises a kindred spirit and supplies the youngster with a steady supply of extra-curricular reading.

During an American football match, Charlie plucks up the courage to chat to openly gay classmate Patrick (Ezra Miller). He, in turn, introduces Charlie to his free-spirited stepsister, Sam (Emma Watson), who tries to bring the shy newcomer out of his shell.

DIRECTOR Scott Derrickson, who previously helmed The Exorcism Of Emily Rose, returns to supernatural horror for this found-footage thriller about a husband who foolishly delves into the past.

who toolising deves into the past. True crime novelist Ellison (Ethan Hawke) moves house with his wife Tracy (Juliet Rylance) and children Ashley (Clare Foley) and Trevor (Michael Hall D'Addario) to a property where the previous owners came to an unfortunate end.

Four members of the ill-fated family were murdered and the only survivor, a child, disappeared without trace from the crime scene

Ellison intends to use this grisly history as the basis for a new book and relishes the chance to sift through Super 8 footage in the attic, hoping to stumble upon clues to what really happened.

what reany happened.

As he delves into the case, Ellison reveals strange symbols and enlists the help of Professor Jonas (Vincent D'Onofrio), an expert in cults, to unravel the mystery. LOOPER Joe (Joseph Gordon-Levitt) is an assassin, or looper, whose purpose is to shoot hooded targets who have been sent back in time by his mob bosses, represented in 2044 by the sadistic Abe (Jeff Daniels). Like his fellow loopers, Joe knows his life expectancy is finite and one day he will have to gun down his future self. So when that time comes and Joe hesitates from his duty, allowing 'future' Joe (Bruce Willis) to escape, the race between hunter and hunted begins in earnest. Eventually, both Joes gravitate towards a remote farmhouse where fiercely protective mother Sara (Emily Blunt) is raising her son Cid (Pierce Gagnon) far from prying eyes.

RESIDENT EVIL: RETRIBUTION At the conclusion of Resident Evil: Afterlife, Alice (Milla Jovovich) found herself on board a spaceship, repelling hordes of heavily armed Umbrella Corporation soldiers. The vessel explodes and Alice plummets into icy waters below, waking some time later as a prisoner in a subterranean facility. Ada Wong (Bingbing Li), the right-hand woman of Albert Wesker (Shawn Roberts), helps Alice to escape her confinement and it transpires that an artificial intelligence called the Red Queen has usurped Wesker as head honcho of the corporation and is amassing forces to eradicate mankind.

THE SWEENEY DI Jack Regan (Ray Winstone) and sidekick George Carter (Ben Drew) are on the trail of a gang of wily European thieves led by slippery Francis Allen (Paul Anderson). After apprehending Allen, the team cannot find sufficient evidence to charge him and are forced to let him go after hours of intense questioning. Tensions within the department explode when internal affairs officer Ivan Lewis (Steve Mackintosh) embarks on a personal crusade to bring down Regan, who just happens to be bedding Lewis's wife Nancy (Hayley Atwell).

PARANORMAN (3D & 2D) When a small town comes under siege by zombies, who are you going to call? Well if you've got any sense it will be misunderstood local boy Norman (voiced by Kodi Smit-McPhee), who speaks with the dead and is told by deranged uncle Prenderghast (John Goodman) he is the only person who can save the town from a centuriesold witch's curse.

Situated in the small hamlet of Jacks Hatch with easy access to Broadley Common and with Epping Green approximately one mille away, this property offers almost 4,000 sq.ft. of living accommodation.

A veranda-covered entrance opens into the impressive entrance hall with a split staircase rising to the first floor landing.

Next to the sitting room is the dining room which also has double doors to the veranda, as well as a pair of sash windows with segment radiators beneath.

Double doors open to the huge kitchen/family room which has a fabulous vaulted ceiling and structural oak timbers. The kitchen features a range of matching base, drawer and eye level units, a central island with bevelled granite top and sash windows to three aspects.

The study has double doors opening to the front veranda and a cupboard housing media and security equipment. Next to this is a bedroom and a cloakroom.

Bedroom two also has an ensuite shower room and a large sash window giving views over the garden.

Also on this floor are a further two bedrooms – both with ensuites – and the family bathroom.

Jacks Hatch House sits in a mature plot of formal gardens of more than two-and-a-half acres with a further acre of paddock at the rear of the garden.

The rear garden is currently laid mainly to grass with various mature trees plus an extensive Indian sandstone paved terrace.

I Have Just Experienced A Wonderful Moment!

One of the iovs of being an estate agent, having One of the joys of being an estate agent, having the opportunity of meeting interesting people. Everyone has a story to fell but this time I had the privilege of touching history and meeting a hero. A lovely mature couple, drove up from Sussex (Gods own country!) for me to show them round a house here in the old town. It started well, the gentleman (mid 70's I guess) loved cricket and supported Sussex, my country as well! Good start I thought.

I left him to wonder round to take his notes so I sat down in the lounge with his wife and my lady client. The following 15 minutes chat was a history lesson of life s challenges and opportunities against a frightening young life.

The lady was born 1932 in Dresden, lived in a small village just outside and suffered first, under the dreadful Nazi's and their propaganda, the British bombing then, from 1945 under the stringent Russian regime in Eastern Germany.

At the tender age of 13 immediately after the war she was escorted around the local concentrations camp with her school friends, the Russians to witness camp with her school friends, the Russians to witness camp with her school friends, the Russlans to witness the Nazi atroctities then at the age of 17 she was smuggled out (at a considerable financial cost to her father) and escaped to freedom in West Germany. She travelled around Europe, lived in Switzerland then around the early 1950's arrived in Oxford as an au pair and met her now husband.

I have only scraftched the surface of her story, a book has been written and thave been promised a book has been written and I have been promised a copy. I do hope she remembers to send me one. What a day and privilege to meet someone special.

What Do We Have To Do To Sell?

In an increasingly competitive market place, we know that as long as your property is priced attractively, it will sell. However, many people spend a fortune on improving their homes expecting at least the cost of the improvements to be returned to them via an increased sale price. This can be a mistake, as 90% of a property s value can usually be attributed to its location and size the two things you can t change!

Our advice on this is to be careful. Certainly, improve your home to make it appeal to prospective buyers, but your primary objective should not necessarily be to add significant value, but to enhance saleability. This means making your property more desirable than the other properties currently on the market at about the same price.

You can make any property desirable simply by quoting a price which makes it look amazingly good value next to the others, which may themselves of course be overpriced. However, without throwing your money into subsidising someone s purchase, there are simple things that can be done to make sure your property looks worth the money.

Much of it relates to lifestyle as much as it does to bricks and mortar. For example, a thorough spring clean complete with the smell of pine bleach in the bathroom suggests you re proud of your home and care for it. Cost? Probably about 20p!

How about a lick of paint on the doors? Stripped floorboards generally look better than worn carpets, and a day s work in the garden pays real dividends. Try new light fittings or re-grouting the bathroom tiles. Also, remove any superfluous items from the garden and inside the property, keeping your storage areas tidy as well.

The key is not to rely on your prospective buyers intuition! Make it easy for them to imagine how pleasant it would be to live in your property, and you could well prompt an early sale.

We Sold 70% of our Lots!!

We were extremely pleased to witness a massive turnout of over 200 people at our September auction. This increase in audience to our first auction proves to us that there is a definite and positive interest in the use of auctions to sell and buy property.

With 17 lots to sell, 2 of which sold pre-auction, we had 15 lots to get through and are pleased to report that we sold 6 lots under the hammer with a further 4 sales made after auction. A 70% sale rate in only the second auction proves to us that sale by auction is definitely the way forward. With the many benefits of auction including a quick sale, no fall throughs, higher profile marketing and competitive bidding, there is little wonder why sellers and buyers alike are opting for an easier, quicker route to buying and selling property.

However, we do believe that we could improve our sale rate and in order to increase the chances of a definite sale, vendors must be prepared to lower their reserve prices and accept a lesser guide price. It is a fact in auction psychology that buyers are more likely to bid if the reserve guides are lower. This creates a greater interest, leading to greater competition and therefore a greater chance of competitive bidding meeting and exceeding reserve prices. Moving forward, it is therefore our duty and objective to teach and guide future sellers and buyers the psychology and workings of auction in order to achieve the best results for all of our clients.

Our next auction will be on Tuesday 27th November 2012 at 12.00 noon at Fanhams Hall, Ware. If you are interested in including your property or land for sale or wish to be added to our mailing list to receive future brochures, or indeed for any other information, please contact us, we would be delighted to hear from you.

Now taking entries for our Auction on Tuesday 27th November 2012 at 12.00 noon at Fanhams Hall Hotel, Ware, Herts, SG12 7PZ

MSIONS Find 1000s of cars locally .co.uk

By Iain Dooley

N the gold-plated world of the luxury saloon, the Mercedes' S-Class is king. In recent years the German firm's luxo-barge has undergone a radical transformation from visual wallflower to striking contender for Boldest Saloon of the Year Award.

Contrast this with BMW's 7 Series. The previous generation car came out of the blocks in 2002 rocking a radical new look that divided opinion.

The current fifth generation car is a noticeably more sober machine. Where the S-Class wears the latest in cutting edge Italian clothes, the 7 Series opts for Hugo Boss.

Still, this approach hasn't harmed the big BMW's chances. Demand for the car globally remains strong, especially so in emerging markets where the petrol models are often the default choice.

Only one thing was holding the car back – its ride. Compared to more the more recent and advanced cars from Mercedes and Audi, the 7 Series lacked the same level of precision and comfort, which is hardly ideal for something pitched at the executive and chauffeur markets.

This, then, is a thoroughly revised 7 Series aimed squarely at the competition. It's fair to say that BMW's

Fact File

BMW 750i

PRICE from £71,340

ENGINE: TRANSMISSION: PERFORMANCE: ECONOMY: CO<sup>2</sup> RATING: 4.4-litre V8 petrol unit developing 443bhp 8-speed automatic driving the rear wheels Top speed 155mph, 0-62mph in 4.8 secs 32.8mpg 199g/km exterior designer was on a three-day week as the changes are limited to tweaks to the grille and new LED headlights. Granted, the latter is a big improvement, just don't go looking for major sheet metal adjustments.

Progress has been made, though. Considerable gains have been made in the ride and comfort departments as well as in boosting economy and reducing emissions across the range, thanks in part to the standard fit inclusion of a new eight-speed auto gearbox and engine stop-start.

For diesel users – that's the popular 730d and performance-orientated 740d – it means a sub-150g/km CO² rating for the former. For the 750i petrol V8 model tested here there have also been useful reductions in running costs, and this model does much to highlight BMW's impressive efforts with its Efficient Dynamics programme.

The 443bhp V8 is no slouch, propelling the 7 Series to a sub five second zero to 62mph time and on to an electronically limited 155mph. But what's really clever for a car of this size are the 32.8mpg economy and 199g/km CO² figures, a result of BMW's engineers tinkering with the engine's Valvetronic technology to modify the intake system during periods of low activity. This isn't as aggressive as Audis cylinder shutdown approach but, in BMW's words, it's more like dimming them. While a diesel model is more appropriate for cash-poor Europeans, the 750i is almost a default choice for buyers in emerging markets. And its performance should give a good indication as to how the cooking diesels will behave with the same mechanical changes.

To counter the criticism of the old car's inconsistent ride quality, self-leveling rear suspension is now a standard feature across the range. This, combined with various detailed changes to the suspension hardware, delivers a welcome improvement when driving over mixed surfaces and the predictable potholes that scar urban landscapes the world over.

Also welcome is the inclusion of BMW's Eco Pro mode in the grandly titled Driving Experience Control system. Essentially, this offers the driver another choice alongside Comfort and Sport, enabling a firmer or softer ride, weighty or finger-light steering, the appropriately complimentary damper settings and, crucially, engine mapping to match the various modes.

If you need a gentle reminder as to what mode you're in, the car's new 10-inch digital display changes colour to match.

The facelift has also allowed BMW to add the wealth of recent new hi-tech kit from lesser models, such as web connected services, high-end audio options, intelligent headlights and enhanced electronic safety and convenience aids.

Overall, then, this mid-life uplift for the 7 Series has done a good job of keeping the car in touch with the competition. Buyers at this end of the market are often a conservative bunch, which helps put the oh-so-subtle exterior changes into perspective.

What's more impressive is the step forward in ride comfort. Don't forget, this car and its longer wheelbase cousin are key movers in the executive chauffeur industry, and the new car's set-up has done much to banish the shimmy and shake of the old car. Factor in BMW's relentless approach towards boosting fuel economy and you've got a more rounded and appealing proposition.

Star Sports Editor ALAN SCOTT meets Harlow Paralympian Noel Thatcher to look back at the London 2012 Paralympics

FAR from being envious of missing out on competing at a Paralympic Games in his home country, Harlow's famous Paralympian Noel Thatcher can look back with satisfaction on an event which he knows made the world sit up and take notice of disabled sport.

Thatcher (46), of Dadswood, competed at six different Paralympics from New York in 1984 (the last time the Games were staged in a different city to the Olympics), Seoul in Korea, Atlanta in the United States, plus Sydney in Australia and finally Athens in 2004.

The partially sighted long-distance runner won five gold medals in total.

Thatcher, who was made an MBE in 1997, had a front-row seat at the Paralympics as he was invited to offer his expert analysis as a pundit for the BBC News Channel throughout the Games.

He said: "There was an amazing response to the Paralympics [in London]. It was the first time I had witnessed it from the public's perspective.

"One of the Australian athletes who was up against David Weir said 'London just gets what we do'. The British public understand Paralympic sport.

"The fact that we sold 7.5 million tickets sent out the message early

"We wanted to see what form of legacy would materialise. There was a huge shift in the mind set of the way people look at disabled

"But the Paralympics is just one per cent of disabled people. What's important is that we don't just produce Paralympians but disabled people have better access to sport. "Hopefully now they have a platform and we can lobby for better opportunities for disabled people to

Thatcher, a physiotherapist, believes for the first time disabled athletes can stand alongside Olympians as role

He said: "The athletes took the lead. They were amazing role models. The Paralympics is now global. It has come of age commercially. To see David Weir on a billboard? It showed that we as a nation can put disabled sports people on a pedestal.

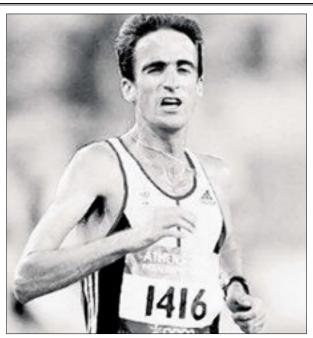

"Having these people like Jonnie Peacock to aspire to. There was this little girl who even made a cardboard leg. This was thanks to the media. The media took on board the Paralympics like no other Games

"For Peacock to have the confidence at 19 to quiet a stadium down. I was blown away by the young athletes, Hannah Cockroft and David Weir. Weir's performance was so dominant, you run out of superlatives.

"[In the marathon] he did did not have anything left. At the end he was slumped over his wheelchair. The end was symbolic. These things don't happen by chance. The athletes put in a tremendous amount of training and hard work.

"It's hard to single out one, you have Sarah Storey and Ellie Simmonds.

"These athletes were really tested and still they came out on top. They did not have easy races all the time

Harlow duo can bounce back from 2012 'snub'

THE non-presence of Harlow athletes Richard Chiassaro and Anne Wafula-Strike at London 2012 was a disappointment for Paralympic veteran Noel Thatcher, but he is confident there are huge roles in the Paralympic movement for both to play in very different ways. "I felt sorry for the Paralympians from Harlow. They did not make the team. Life is tough when you don't make it after putting in all that hard work," he said.

"It was like the Coe, Ovett and Thompson era. Great Britain had a vast pool of talent.

There were 250 records broken in the pool alone. There were personal bests. national records. The selection process was vindicated by the level of success – people did win medals.

"I am full of sympathy for these guys [Wafula-Strike and Chiassaro]. But Richie has got lots of time and Anne has a big role in sport beyond competing. She is a great ambassador. She will go a long way in sport at any level. "The reason they [did not compete] is because we have a lot of people who are really that good."

REJECTED: Richard Chiassaro and Anne Wafula Strike

London Games raised bar for disabled sport

NOEL THATCHER: "We wanted to see what form of legacy would materialise. There was a huge shift in the mind set of the way people look at disabled sport."

The last of Thatcher's Paralympics appearances came in the Athens Games in 2004, the spiritual home of the Olympics.

"I'm getting too old. From my point of view it was nice to sit back and watch it. I was a BBC News pundit. It was always better to watch it and be part of it. I could hear the roar of the crowd. It was great to be involved in something special. To watch my protege, David Devine, and see his performance in the 1,500m.

"Every athlete would have liked to have been there. But I came down the stairs and my body tells me I can't do it. It's creaking."

Thatcher still competes today and is an active member of Harlow Running Club, based at Mark Hall Sportscentre.

He still runs five times a week and is starting to prepare for the International Paralympic Committee marathon which will be run alongside the London Marathon in April.

He recalls fondly what it was like locally when he was a Paralympian.

"As a Harlow athlete I really benefited from the level of support from the local community. When I was competing you could feel that level of support.'

And Thatcher, a father-of-one who lives in Harlow with his Japanese wife Yumi, believes the London 2012 showpiece has set a precedent for disabled sport.

"We have clearly raised our game and we need to take on that momentum. At London 2012 we had 54 athletes under 22 [years]. We have got a very, very strong core of sports people pushing us forward to Rio [where the Paralympics will be held in 2016].

"The USA will look at this. There will be a huge culture shift in the nations. We could get close to Russia. We have set the bar for all the other nations. They will be gunning for us." Thatcher also paid tribute to the army of paid volunteers, who made the Olympics and Paralympics so special. "The Gamesmakers were amazing. The support the athletes got was fantastic," he said.

BBC pundit Noel happy with C4's 'funky' coverage

NOEL Thatcher defended Channel 4's coverage of the London 2012 Paralympics – and admitted he revelled in his role as a pundit for the BBC News channel throughout the extravaganza.

Channel 4 came in for criticism but Thatcher believes the broadcaster did "To use people like Ade Adepitan as presenters was an inspired move. Channel 4 did an amazing job. These people had personal experience of the Games. The coverage was funky," he

He particularly enjoyed The Last Leg which took a satirical view of the Games and was presented by disabled people, with quite a few moments of controversy.

Some of the humour on The Last Leg was a bit near the mark, but Thatcher took it all in good spirit. "It was like medical humour. We all laugh about things Some people found it a bit dodgy. But it showed we are normal. It breaks barriers," he said.

"I get people come up to me and they are worried about calling me blind or having virtually impaired sight. It showed it's okay to approach us. We can take the pee out of ourselves."

The Harlow Running Club member loved working at the BBC studios, which overlooked the main stadium. He said: "I was a late call-up. It was exciting. The BBC did not have the broadcasting rights [which went to Channel 4], but it was a complete honour.

"Their level of knowledge [of disabled sport] was amazing. The studio was in a tower block overlooking the Olympic site. We were 21 floors up. There were amazing views of the main stadium, the Aquatics Centre and the Village. I had a great view of the fireworks at the end as well.

"I had to do quite a lot of hard work and read up on everything, but it is something that I will really treasure."

Rams still searching for elusive first win

HARLOW are still looking for their first win of the season but could take some solace from their narrow defeat at league new boys Old

The hosts have not lost in more than 20 games going back to last season, but the Rams ran them close on Saturday.

Darren Hawkins came in for Kane Claridge at number eight and played extremely well, while Michael Dobson fitted in comfortably at inside centre for Luke Bowering.

Harlow took an early lead from a Danny Smith penalty but the visitors paid for a poor clearance kick. From this the hosts exerted pressure through their forwards from which their wing scored an unconverted try.

Smith kicked and then missed a penalty before the Rams again paid the penalty for a poor clearance kick. The home backs made valuable ground before the forwards finished off the move for a try that was converted, leaving the Rams trailing 12-6 at the break.

Cantabrigian almost scored a try before Rhys Powell came on to replace centre Simon

The Rams exerted pressure before they scored through a magnificent 58th minute penalty kick by Smith from inside his own half.

An injury to Dan Bolt meant Rams had to make two positional chances in the front row but they adapted.

Harlow missed out on a try when Chris Webb could not hang onto the ball before Smith made it 12-12 with a 63rd minute penalty.

Another missed touch kick from Harlow allowed the hosts' left winger to gather the ball, kick ahead and win the touch down to put them five points up. The hosts then missed a kickable penalty in front of the posts before the Rams discarded two penalty opportunities to go for a try which proved elusive.

The only consolation was that Harlow got their first point of the season as they lost by seven

Defiant Harlow Town manager vows to carry on despite crushing home defeat

HARLOW TOWN 0 BRENTWOOD TOWN 5 RYMAN LEAGUE, DIVISION ONE NORTH

HAWKS boss Danny Chapman has vowed to fight on after a humiliating home defeat against Brentwood Town which came just days after acting skipper Getro Kilapi quit the club.

Tuesday's horror show came a fort-night after Harlow Town were knocked out of the FA Trophy by the same side. It also came four days after mid-

Kilapi was injured playing Sunday

League football last season and could not play for Harlow in a crucial game. Chapman disciplined him and left him out of the side but gave him a second chance in the close season.

Florence went off before the break with a hamstring injury while striker

Jeff Hammond was also forced off.

Chapman was not able to field young Leyton Orient central defenders Sean Grace and De'reece Vanderhyde as they had taken knocks and the League Two club would not release them.

Robbie Reed put the visitors ahead in the 15th minute with a 10-yard shot which should have been saved by Bertrand Bossu.

The same Brentwood player made it 2-0 when he tapped in a pass from Alex Read in the 51st minute.

Harlow then gave the ball away to let Read fire home on 73 minutes before Read struck the home cross bar

ANDY Boughtwood and James Munro grabbed braces as Harlow recorded their first win of the season.

The hosts, who included debutant Reece Boughtwood and Luke Krzoska as a substitute following a thigh injury, took the lead after 11 minutes when Andy Boughtwood shot home from a few yards.

The home lead was doubled on the 20-minute mark when Munro's shot from the top of the D was deflected by a defender's stick into the net.

Munro then made it 3-0 after beating the goalkeeper at his near post from an acute angle shortly before half-time. Early second half action saw East London pull a goal back through an unstoppable reverse stick strike into the top right corner of the Harlow goal. Harlow immediately hit back with Andy Boughtwood finishing a smart move.

East London managed to score again to pull the deficit back to two goals on 55 minutes before Harlow's Craig Cholerton completed the scoring following a slick move. HARLOW (squad): Johnson, HARLOW Hawks were too good for local rivals Passmores Panthers when they beat them 106-22 in the Herts Cup. It was Panthers' first game and their lack of experience. Nick Moss connected with two early three pointers before Russell Stonehouse scored freely to give Hawks a 23-7 lead going into the second quarter. This saw Moss score 12 points and the Hawks led 42-14 at the halfway stage.

There were easy lay-ups for Lee
